Once, somebody said that human rights and democracy were the two components of human dignity. And again, democracy without human rights, democracy is not equal to only free elections, if you think that a free election is only to have more than one candidate, count the votes properly and the winner gets the presidency. Because if you don't have an independent judiciary, if you don't have checks and balances, look at what's going on in some countries in Latin America. You don't have democracy without free elections, but you need to have checks and balances, rule of law, and that's another word for human rights also.
