

Richard Schifter

I think he and I saw it pretty much the same way, which is that what we believe is basically what John Locke wrote many, many centuries ago, namely that individuals have a right to certain liberties that no government, including even a democratic government, can deprive them of. And basically it's a matter of believing in the principals of the U.S. Bill of Rights.