

Edmundo Vargas Carreño

I think that George was a person from the center or even from the left center. He was a social democratic. He believed not only on what the U.S. has understand for human rights; that is, the civil and political rights. He has an ideation also for economic and social human rights. I think that after Chile, because he had worked first in Chile and I know, his second passion was Poland. He was so happy with what happened in those years with solidarity. As I told you, he used a pin of solidarity. He was following what was happening in Poland. So he has also a commitment for good causes of solidarity in Poland and others.
