The Tradition of Excellence at Texas

Law begins with our world-class faculty. With more than 105 full-time faculty members and 134 adjuncts, the depth and breadth of our highly decorated team of teachers includes a rich mix of renowned scholars and masters of the practice, who provide coverage across an unusually broad set of topics.

Our faculty members are known for their accessibility and helpfulness to students, and this has practical significance. Knowing the professor’s door is always open for office-hour consultations can make all the difference for a student trying to grasp a difficult concept. Simply put, our students not only have great classroom experiences, they also build relationships with faculty members that play a critical role in career development.

Our students are not simply trained to be prepared for a career, but for all the opportunities their degree will afford across a lifetime.
Our faculty members are deeply engaged in scholarship and public service, and are among leading national figures in an array of academic fields. They advocate for justice, testify before Congress and provide advice to a broad array of public and private entities. They speak out in national and regional media, they blog and they tweet. They embody the dynamism of law, and both reflect and take part in the central role law plays in our society.

FIRST-YEAR COURSES
Texas Law offers the benefits of an expansive school with a rich curriculum and breadth of faculty, and a first-year experience that is characterized by a more intimate experience than most large schools can aspire to provide. We achieve this by dividing the first-year class into four sections, then further divide each section into a much smaller group, and then subdivide each of the smaller groups for purposes of legal research and writing classes.

SECOND- AND THIRD-YEAR COURSES
At the upper levels, the richness of Texas Law’s curriculum provides an astonishing array of options. Students can specialize in particular areas if they wish, or diversify broadly across subjects and methods. Opportunities include 16 clinics, a robust trial advocacy training program and a range of internships.

MASTERING THE ART

AT TEXAS LAW, THE CRITICAL SKILLS OF LEGAL writing, research, oral argument and advocacy are not farmed out to professors-in-training — they are taught by a dedicated faculty team organized under the David J. Beck Center for Legal Research, Writing and Appellate Advocacy. The center offers a variety of advanced classes and experiential training at the upper levels and sponsors the law school’s interscholastic moot court teams, which travel to national and international competitions.

EXPAND YOUR LEGAL EDUCATION
TEXAS LAW HAS NUMEROUS CENTERS THAT give students opportunities to explore their special interests through coursework, research, advocacy, events and casework.

Engage With Human Rights
THE BERNARD AND AUDRE RAPOPORT CENTER for Human Rights and Justice offers students unique opportunities to collaborate in an interdisciplinary human rights community, engage with some of the world’s leading human rights thinkers and pursue life-changing human rights internships.

TEXAS LAW STUDENTS CAN INTEGRATE THEIR LEGAL STUDIES WITH OTHER AREAS OF INTEREST THROUGH COLLOQUIA AND DUAL DEGREES.

Colloquia courses provide students the opportunity to study with scholars from around the world on topics and problems at the intersection of two or more disciplines. In this way, students participate in the evolution of scholarship in emerging areas of law.

The law school encourages the pursuit of dual degrees, and because we are part of a large research university, there are numerous highly ranked programs to take advantage of:

EXPERIENTIAL EDUCATION

Start Exploring

EXPERIENTIAL EDUCATION IS THE BRIDGE BETWEEN THE CLASSROOM AND THE practice of law. With one of the largest programs of its kind in the nation, Texas Law offers every student multiple opportunities to gain hands-on experience for academic credit. Our students dive deeply into an extensive array of clinics, internships, advocacy courses and competitions, and pro bono projects that integrate law, theory, strategy and skills. Find opportunities to lead and learn by working alongside attorneys and faculty members on cases and projects that can affect the community, country and world. Virtually all of our students take multiple experiential courses that help prepare them for legal employment.
CLINICS

Students in our clinics work closely with faculty members and supervising attorneys on complex cases and legal issues in real-world settings. Students assist clients as diverse as victims of domestic violence, prisoners facing the death penalty, neighborhood groups affected by environmental hazards, and clients seeking review of their cases before the U.S. Supreme Court. We offer 16 clinics including the Entrepreneurship and Community Development Clinic, which provides transactional business law representation to entrepreneurs and nonprofits, such as a statewide group working to help employers provide affordable small loans to individuals as an alternative to predatory payday loans, and the Children’s Rights Clinic, through which students represent children in court proceedings related to abuse and neglect.

INTERNSHIPS

Texas Law’s internships offer students a range of opportunities working with experienced supervising attorneys to develop important legal skills; explore career possibilities; gain insight into legal institutions and the role of lawyers; and serve the public. Students in the Prosecution Internship and the U.S. Attorney Internship work directly with prosecutors on their cases. Students help shape law in the Legislative Internship by working with offices connected to the Texas Legislature. Students also work across the country and the world through the Semester in Practice Internship and the International Internship. Students have interned recently at the Securities and Exchange Commission, Human Rights Watch, the Office of the Texas Attorney General, the U.S. Department of Justice, Legal Aid of Northwest Texas, the American Civil Liberties Union and other judicial, nonprofit, government and legislative offices.

PUBLIC SERVICE ACTIVITIES

Beginning on their first day at Texas Law, our students work to improve access to justice by making a commitment to provide pro bono legal services to those in need. The Richard and Ginni Mithoff Pro Bono Program organizes projects that

“To contribute to the case and to a 9-0 victory was incredible. [Even] most practicing attorneys will never, ever take a case to the Supreme Court and will never get the kind of experience we did.”

Lisa Elizondo, recent student in the Supreme Court Clinic

Twenty-one students from the Supreme Court Clinic worked on, and attended oral arguments for, a United States Supreme Court case that proved victorious in a unanimous 9-0 decision.

provide legal services for underserved individuals and communities, creating opportunities for students to build their lawyering skills and leadership abilities. The Mithoff Program involves faculty and alumni in introducing students to the legal profession’s tradition and ethical obligation of pro bono service.

Texas Law has three academic centers that bring faculty and students together to study issues related to equal access to justice: the Bernard and Audre Rapoport Center for Human Rights and Justice, the Capital Punishment Center, and the William Wayne Justice Center for Public Interest Law.

The school provides widespread financial support to students interested in public service by awarding numerous public interest scholarships, summer stipends, postgraduate fellowships and loan repayment assistance to graduates embarking on public interest careers.

Volunteer Danny Williams, ’15, worked with students through the Texas Law Youth Court at Webb Middle School. Youth Court supports children who may be at risk of entering the school-to-prison pipeline by engaging them in a positive disciplinary program.
Pro Bono students assisted the South Texas Civil Rights Project with a variety of projects, including helping assemble immigration petitions for victims of domestic violence and drafting wills in communities where multiple informal land transfers have created thorny title issues.

ADVOCACY

The Advocacy Program Combines Theory and techniques with client and case management skills and practical interdisciplinary training to help students become effective advocates. Students learn through numerous hands-on courses and competitions focused on trial skills, appellate advocacy and transactional work. Since 2000, Texas Law mock trial, moot court and ADR teams have won a combination of 22 national championships and 24 regional championships. The school’s facilities for teaching trial and appellate advocacy include a state-of-the-art courtroom complete with judicial chambers and jury rooms.

Texas Law advocacy students and coaches celebrate their victories in interscholastic advocacy competitions in front of the iconic UT Tower lit orange in their honor.

SOCIETy PROgrAm
The Texas Law Society Program — the only program of its kind in the country — provides students with a small community during law school. Each first-year student is assigned to one of eight societies and remains a member of that society throughout law school. The groups meet with faculty advisers and alumni mentors and participate in service and social activities.

DEAN’S FELLOWS
Each first-year student is also assigned to a group led by upper-class law students who serve as advisers and counselors throughout the year. These are the Dean’s Fellows. They welcome incoming first-year law students and host get-togethers prior to orientation. They plan social activities and academic skills sessions throughout the year.

Each fall Texas Law’s eight societies compete in the Society Games, a field day where the students engage in friendly rivalry.
