Dear Mike,

Your letter - which I just read on getting back from Cambridge last night - is realistic, magnanimous, and still keeps the spark of fighting spirit, which I would truly hate to see quenched by an unfortunate coincidence of animus and timidity. It was a very bad show, but it is increasingly clear that you are one person who does not come out of it very badly, after the initial shock and disarray wear off. The press seems relatively composed, and I'm inclined to feel we should keep them that way, even at the risk of substantiating error.

No one is offering you any sympathy, which is as it should be - but there is still plenty of sensible advice to be had for the asking. When all the prospects are arrayed before you, I for one will be very happy to help you spin the wheel or throw darts at the board. If I can't reach you, would you call me in Washington anytime starting 8/4 at 296-5616 (Goldwater headquarters, of course). I'll save this news until then, Regards. Bob
