RECOGNITION REPORT

SEPTEMBER 1, 2024 THROUGH AUGUST 31, 2025

Letter from the Dean

Dear alumni and supporters,

These are fantastic times at Texas Law. An amazing new class has just arrived, bursting with enthusiasm and talent. Our recent graduates are posting record-breaking numbers for bar passage and employment. The school's world-class faculty is growing by leaps and bounds, and we've just launched our new AI Innovation & Law Program. Great things are happening everywhere you look.

All this success is thanks to you. You mentor students, hire graduates, and contribute to our people and programs. Your support means we can continue to fulfill our role as the flagship law school of Texas and, indeed, as one of the premier law schools in the nation.

On behalf of everyone here in our corner of the campus, thank you!

Hook 'em,

Bobby Chesney
Dean, The University of Texas School of Law

KEETON FELLOWS UPDATE

Dean Page Keeton — lawyer, professor, and transformational leader — launched Texas Law's first annual giving campaign in the 1950s. He believed great public law schools require private support to achieve lasting excellence. That principle continues to guide us.

A new chapter for the Keeton Fellows program begins Sept. 1, 2025 — the first update since its creation in 1992. To help ensure the Annual Fund can continue to support student scholarships, faculty excellence, academic programming, and the dean's strategic initiatives, the recognition program will change in the following ways:

- The minimum giving level will increase from $1,000 to $2,500 annually (Sept. 1 –Aug. 31).
- Only gifts to the Law School Annual Fund will qualify for recognition.
- A $1,000 minimum will apply to graduates of the last decade and those in public service roles.

Keeton Fellows have always embodied the pride, passion, and generosity that define our Texas Law community. We are deeply grateful for the continued support of this esteemed circle of alumni and friends.

For questions, please contact Chloé Dwyer, Associate Director of Annual Giving and Alumni Relations, at chloe.dwyer@law.utexas.edu

Reunion 2025 Breaks Records

They came to reminisce and reconnect, with plenty of laughter and even a bit of dancing. But above all, they came to celebrate a lifelong bond with Texas Law. And they did so in record-breaking fashion.

Nearly 1,000 alumni returned to Austin this April for a milestone Reunion Weekend, representing six decades of Texas Law graduates—from the Class of 1960 to the Class of 2020. Special recognition was given to classes ending in “o” and “5,” but the celebration transcended generations. This year’s reunion marked a historic moment for both attendance and philanthropy: more than $1 million was raised to support current and future students through scholarships and the Summer Public Service Program.

The Class of 1975 led the way, with collective contributions totaling more than $540,000, setting a new all-time record for reunion class giving.

This remarkable achievement came as no surprise to the class’s dedicated eight-member reunion committee, including Scott Atlas and Jeff and Kathleen Civins. “Everybody pitched in—making calls, sending emails, and reminding classmates why we were so excited to reconnect,” shared Atlas.

Kathleen Civins reflected on the enduring closeness of their class. “There are about half a dozen couples from our class who stayed close over the years. They married, became godparents to each other’s kids, vacationed together. It’s been a lifelong connection.”

That sense of community translated into a powerful impact. The generosity of reunion classes will directly support the students of today and tomorrow. Elizabeth

Hundt ’10, celebrating her 15th reunion and serving as Texas Law’s chief development officer, highlighted the meaning behind the giving: “Alumni love making sure the next generation of Texas Law students have the same amazing opportunities they did.”

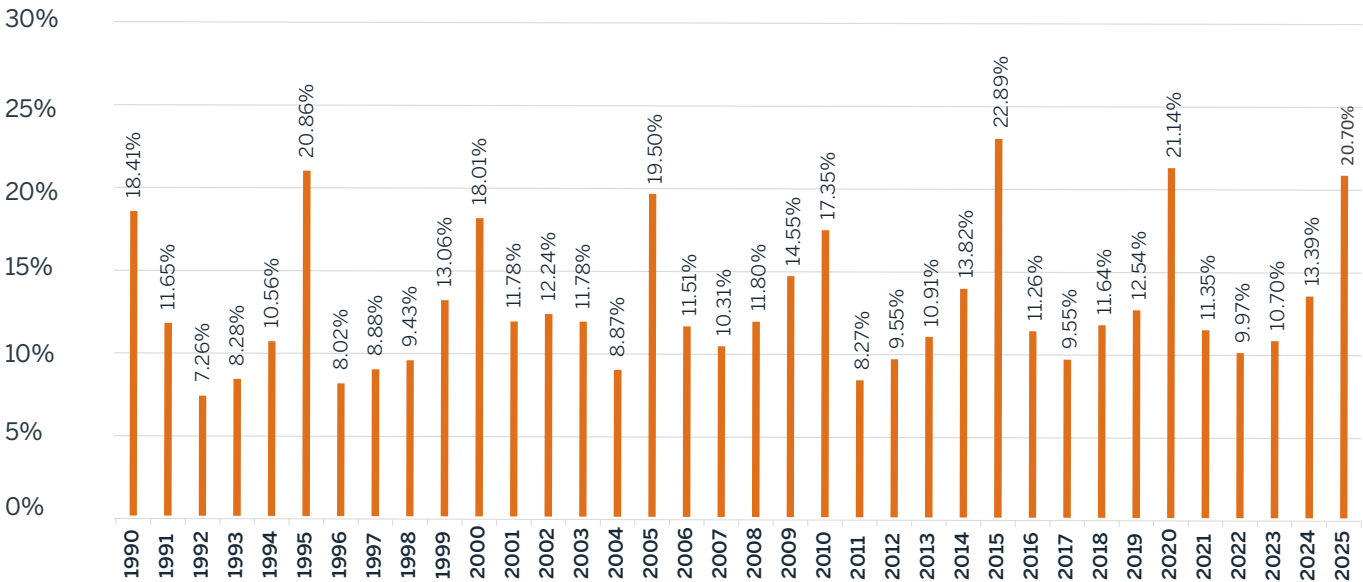

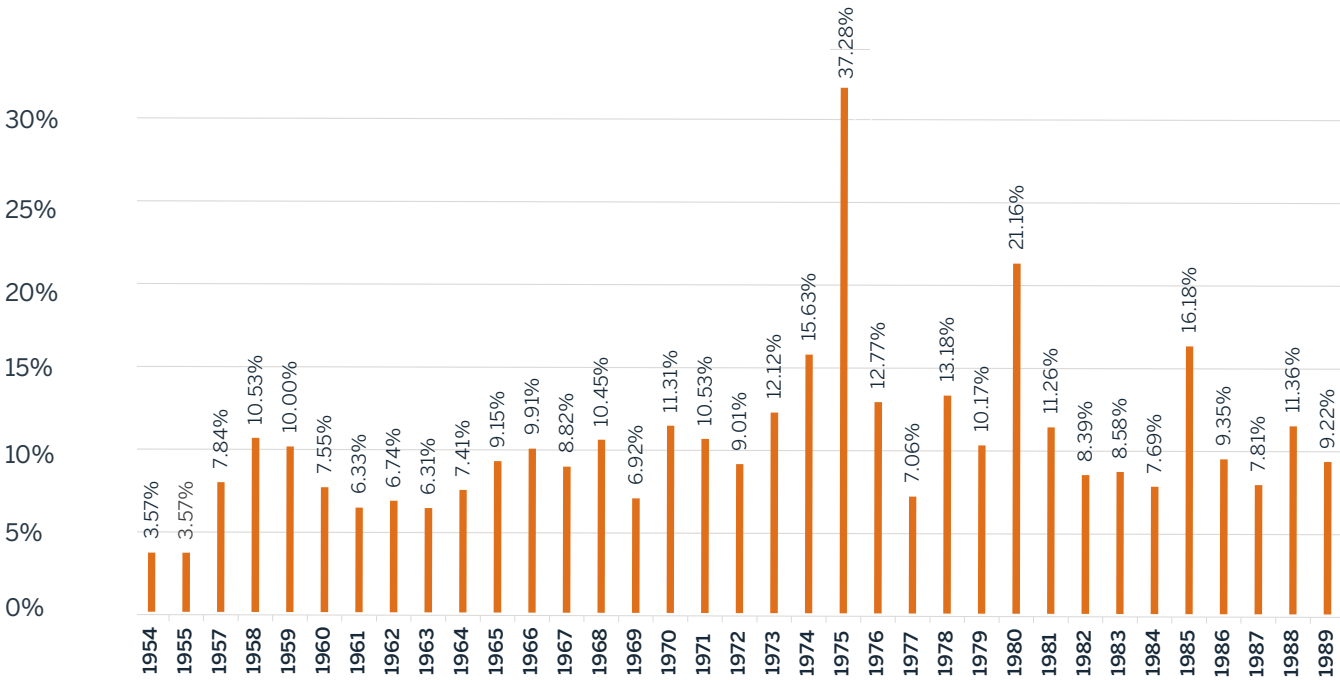

Throughout the weekend, gratitude echoed in every conversation. Jerry Ormand ’65 shared his appreciation: “In so many things I’ve done, my law school education has been beneficial.” He can still name every business and tax course he took while at Texas Law.

For many, the Texas Law alumni network continues to be a defining part of their lives. “It’s like a club when you run across other people, whether you knew them before or not,” said Amy Nettle ’95. “It’s a tradition I’m proud of.”

Her Father's Daughter

Ruth Agather's role model was born in 1931 in Camden, New Jersey. The youngest of four children—his eldest sibling having died in World War II—he was just 12 years old when his father died. With his remaining siblings already out of the household, the responsibility of helping his mother manage the home fell largely to him. Through their close bond, his mother nurtured both his curiosity and perseverance. With her encouragement, he set his sights on an education and pursued it with determination—eventually putting himself through college and law school.

Fortunately for Agather '88, her role model wasn't someone distant she only read about, but a close one: her father, Herb Kelleher, who died in 2019. During her childhood, Kelleher was a partner at Oppenheimer, Rosenberg, Kelleher, & Wheatley in San Antonio. He later co-founded Southwest Airlines and held leadership roles, but throughout those years, he regularly brought her into the company of lawyers, shaping her early understanding of the legal profession. Inspired by her father's example, Agather later followed in his professional footsteps.

Growing up, Agather's father taught her valuable lessons—to never give up, remain curious, and pursue knowledge. But perhaps the most lasting impression: the importance of forging one's own path.

Today, Agather is a partner at Rosenthal Pauerstein Sandoloski Agather LLP in San Antonio, where she focuses primarily on real estate and business transactions. Although she sometimes wonders whether she measures up to her father's unmatched drive, she credits him as the built-in mentor who paved the way for her—and made it possible for her to do the same for others.

She supports the Pipeline Program, which assists first-generation students in applying to law school, and the Summer Public Service Program, which supports those pursuing careers in public interest law.

Agather wants to ensure a more representative legal profession. "I'm a big believer in having people from all walks of life participate in our society," she says, with a wide range of perspectives and backgrounds likewise represented in the field of law.

"This country was built on the idea that there are no limits to becoming anything you want to be, but there are impediments, and they're usually financial," she says.

"It's important—for our world and community—to help lift each other up," she says. "If you can help other people achieve a dream, I think 'Why not?'"

She encourages alumni to invest in the lives of young lawyers by attending alumni events and reconnecting with the Law School.

Agather says she's invigorated by being around new lawyers. She's found joy in mentoring young associates and, in turn, learning from them. That exchange keeps Agather hopeful for the profession and for the future.

"These are great young people, and our world's next leadership."

The Winning Ticket

The Albright family hit the lottery—in their own way.

“Education is the best gift you can give somebody, and I hit the lottery in the sense that I never had to worry about where my tuition would come from,” Wilson Albright '17 says. Along with his mom, Alexandra Wilson Albright '80, the two are shaping the family's philanthropy around that win.

A three-generation Texas Law family, Alex and Wilson established the James Wilson Family Scholarship Endowment in honor of James W. Wilson '51, Alex's father and Wilson's grandfather, who died in 2019. Jim sold ladies' shoes to put himself through law school, but he ended up serving as general counsel to Brown & Root, an international construction company in Houston, after practicing law in Austin for many years. He and Alex's mother, Betty Wilson, cared deeply about education and enabled their family to pursue theirs without significant debt.

Wilson says education is a gift that lasts over time, opens doors, and makes you a better person. With their scholarship, the Albright family wants others to experience the opportunities education affords.

“My dad would be so proud—we encouraged each other to pursue a legal education and now, through the scholarship, we're encouraging others,” Alex says, “Wilson and I are doing this together, in dad's name, in appreciation of all he did for us, and in appreciation of the Law School, which gave Jim opportunities that he couldn't have imagined.” So, they want to help others by giving back.

"Education is the best gift you can give someone."

Texas Law holds a special place in the Wilson-Albright family story. Alex spent 29 years as a professor of federal and Texas civil procedure. Jim taught constitutional law for one semester in the 1960s. After retiring from Brown & Root, he returned to the law school to teach construction law as an adjunct for many years.

For Wilson, the connection to Texas Law started young—trick-or-treating through the halls, visiting Alex's office, and working in the Law School mail room during high school. Given that past, he says he was destined to attend Texas Law. Wilson is now in-house at WM Capital Partners in Austin after working for several years at Jackson Walker.

“We've been successful—all of us—thanks to our Texas Law degrees,” says Alex, now a partner at Alexander, Dubose, & Jefferson LLP in Austin. Alex's stepdaughter, Alissa Parsley '12, is also a Texas Law graduate and real estate attorney at Clint Parsley & Associates in Austin.

Wilson, meanwhile, recalls his undergraduate time in the Texas Cowboys, an honorary student service organization at the University of Texas, and their guiding slogan: “Give the best you have to Texas, and the best will come back to you.” And not just financially, but also “with your time, efforts, and energy,” he says.
